

Report on PSNI Surveillance of Journalists and Other Northern Ireland News

【英国本地新闻 BBC Newsline 20250925 北爱尔兰警察局曾非法使用秘密数据库监控记者电话号码】

Summary: A BBC Newsline report covers several key stories from Northern Ireland. An independent review found that the PSNI unlawfully used covert databases to spy on journalists' phone numbers in an effort to identify confidential sources, with 21 identified instances occurring before 2015. While the Chief Constable apologized and stated the surveillance was not widespread, critics and organizations like Amnesty International call for further investigation. In a separate case, a judge ruled that statements from two soldiers given after Bloody Sunday are admissible evidence in the trial of Soldier F for murder. Additionally, a mother in Derry speaks out about the failing care system for her young adult son with complex needs, highlighting a lack of post-school support. The program also notes three candidates will contest the Irish presidential election.
