【【生词双高亮】 经济学人播客：英国脱衣舞俱乐部的衰落】

Summary: The podcast explores the decline of strip clubs in Britain, now numbering around 150 compared to 500 in their heyday. A reporter visits a Norwich club, describing its overwhelming sensory environment while noting its hospitable atmosphere. Clubs face challenges including reputational struggles, cost-of-living pressures, and competition from online pornography. Local councils implement varying policies, with some phasing out clubs through "nil cap" policies while others collaborate on regulation. The discussion argues against one-size-fits-all policies, comparing bad strip clubs to other struggling businesses.
