

Nagasaki Marks 80th Anniversary of Atomic Bombing

【BBC News 20250809 全球现存超一万枚核武器 | 长崎原子弹爆炸80周年 | 幸存者疾呼废核 | 历史学家争议战争终结真相】

Summary: The Japanese city of Nagasaki commemorated the 80th anniversary of the US atomic bombing that killed 74,000 people instantly. Survivors and officials gathered at Peace Park to honor victims and renew calls for nuclear disarmament. Historians debated whether the bombings truly hastened WWII's end, as current global nuclear tensions rise with over 12,000 weapons stockpiled worldwide.

摘要：日本长崎市举行原子弹爆炸80周年纪念活动，7.4万人在爆炸中瞬间丧生。幸存者与政要齐聚和平公园悼念遇难者，呼吁废除核武器。历史学家就"核爆是否加速二战结束"展开激辩，而全球现存的1.23万枚核武器使当前局势更趋紧张。

▶ We had two bells ringing at two minutes.

两座钟鸣响两分钟。

▶ Last 11 marking, the exact moment that the bomb was detonated over Nagasaki on the 9th of August 1945.

最后11秒标记1945年8月9日炸弹在长崎爆炸的精确时刻。

 00:13:52

▶ Three days after a similar bomb had been detonated over Hiroshima.

三天前类似炸弹在广岛引爆。

▶ Joining us on the program is Kai Bird, a surprise winning historian and journalist.

节目嘉宾Kai Bird是意外获奖的历史学家兼记者。

▶ Michael Bell, a combat veteran and World War II historian.

Michael Bell是二战老兵兼历史学家。

▶ If I can come back to you, we heard the mayor of Nagasaki saying that it is important.

回到您——长崎市长强调重要性。

▶ The memory of these events is not forgotten and says Nagasaki will not give up its mission of peace.

这些事件的记忆不容遗忘，长崎不会放弃和平使命。

 00:14:22

▶ Yeah, absolutely.

确实如此。

▶ It is a very important moment.

这是重要时刻。

▶ I take issue as an historian with the whole notion that these two bombs hasten the end of the war.

作为历史学家，我质疑这两颗炸弹加速战争结束的说法。

▶ I know that is a controversial statement, but I think the historical evidence that has been unearthed over the decades really supports the notion that the war actually was ended by the Soviet entry into the Pacific War.

这说法具争议性，但数十年来发掘的史料支持战争实际因苏联参战而结束的观点。

 00:14:50

▶ And not the two bombs that were dropped on August 6th and August 9th.

而非8月6日与9日投下的两颗炸弹。

▶ And it is important to remember that Robert Oppenheimer, the father of the atomic bomb, the man who created this weapon of mass destruction, said just three months after

Hiroshima and Nagasaki were bombed, he described these weapons as weapons of terror that were used on essentially already defeated enemy.

需记住原子弹之父奥本海默在轰炸后三个月称这些为恐怖武器，用于实质上已战败的敌人。

▶ So I would argue that these weapons are not military weapons.

因此我认为这些非军事武器。

bilibili 00:15:26

▶ They have no military use.

它们无军事用途。

▶ And, you know, in the first instance, Hiroshima and Nagasaki, quite clearly, were not military targets.

首先广岛长崎显然非军事目标。

▶ 98% of the victims were civilians, women and children and old men, not soldiers.

98%遇难者是平民——妇孺老人，非士兵。

▶ And that's the nature of this weapon.

这就是该武器的本质。

▶ It is so large, one weapon that can take out an entire city.

威力巨大，一弹可摧毁整座城市。

▶ Yeah, I mean, they are weapons.

是的，它们是武器。

bilibili 00:15:56

▶ You'd say it's controversial, but to be honest, not completely uncommon view that, as you mentioned, these weapons did not facilitate an end of the war.

虽具争议，但如您所言，这些武器未促成战争结束的观点并不罕见。

🎧 It was coming anyway and many academics and writers and historians have put forward that theory.

战争本将结束，许多学者作家历史学家提出该理论。

🎧 Michael Bell, if I can come to you picking up from Kai's points there when America was planning these operations, they were modeling and building models of Japanese civilian homes.

Michael Bell，接续Kai的观点——美国策划行动时曾建模日本民宅。

 00:16:28

🎧 Kai said these were not military targets necessarily.

Kai称这些未必是军事目标。

🎧 They were striking.

它们是打击目标。

🎧 We live in a world now where there are more than 12,000 nuclear weapons.

当今世界存在超1.2万枚核武器。

🎧 It's thought in the world.

据信如此。

🎧 How is this mission of peace progressing, would you say?

您认为和平使命进展如何？

🎧 Well, I mean, certainly as Kai suggested, you know, the proliferation of nuclear weapons today is incredibly concerning, you know, particularly as we as we move from the weapons of World War II into thermal nuclear warheads today.

如Kai所言，当今核扩散极其令人担忧，尤其从二战武器转向现代热核弹头。

 00:17:01

🎧 How do we actually have responsible state craft that can reduce these arsenals?

如何通过负责任的国家行为减少这些武库？

▶ It's difficult to imagine that we can turn back the nuclear age as he's described it.

难以想象能如他所言逆转核时代。

▶ And certainly there's great concern.

确实存在重大忧虑。

▶ I think, you know, to understand the perspectives, the moral aspects of the use of these weapons is really important for our statesman today.

我认为理解使用这些武器的道德层面对当今政治家至关重要。

 00:17:28

▶ And as they think through the implications of the policies that are pursued.

当他们思考政策影响时。

▶ Well, on that point, you know, various treaties and deals exist to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to prevent their use.

关于这点，现有各种条约协议防止核扩散与使用。

▶ But we are seeing some of those deals starting to fall apart and people walk away from them.

但我们看到部分协议开始破裂，各方退出。

▶ Michael, is that the way things are going?

Michael，这是趋势吗？

 00:17:52

▶ You know, I think you can certainly make that case, you know, in some ways, I think today's ceremony is important because it reminds us of the terrible cost of these weapons.

某种程度上确实如此，今日仪式很重要，它提醒我们这些武器的可怕代价。

▶ You may argue that there's strategic value and stability, but you know, that's only if we have people that understand the implications of their use, the historical consequences.

或可争论其战略价值与稳定性，但这需人们理解使用后果与历史影响。

▶ And really, you know, the significantly greater potential of present day nuclear weapons, because even even more fundamental destruction, not just in cities, but you know, to our planet itself.

当今核武器更具毁灭潜力——不仅针对城市，更针对整个星球。

 00:18:34

▶ Kai, if I can ask you about the context of Nagasaki, we had three days previously seen this devastating weapon detonated above Hiroshima.

Kai, 请问长崎背景——三天前我们目睹该毁灭性武器在广岛引爆。

▶ Why did the Japanese Emperor not decide to surrender then?

为何日本天皇当时未决定投降？

▶ Well, they actually after Hiroshima, they had no idea what had actually taken place on the ground.

广岛后他们并不清楚地面实况。

▶ They dispatched a team of people to investigate the nature of the weapon and the devastation that had happened, but it took time to go there and three days is nothing.

他们派出一队人马去调查武器的性质以及已发生的破坏，但前往那里需要时间，而三天根本不算什么。

 00:19:17

▶ And so three days later, Nagasaki happened and, you know, if you can argue that Hiroshima was a psychological terror weapon that would shock the Japanese hard line generals into surrendering, you would have needed to give them a few more days a week or even two to figure out what had happened and to absorb the fact three days later, Nagasaki happened.

因此三天后，长崎遭到轰炸。要知道，如果有人认为广岛原子弹是一种心理恐怖武器，旨在震慑日本强硬派将领投降，那他们本需要更多时间——一周甚至两周——来弄清发生了什么并消化这一事实，然而三天后长崎就遭袭了。

▶ And, you know, Harry Truman, the president at the time, did not actually know that Nagasaki was going to happen three days after Hiroshima.

当时的总统哈里·杜鲁门其实并不知道长崎会在广岛遭袭三天后被轰炸。

▶ He gave sort of a blanket directive to use these weapons.

他只是下达了使用这些武器的笼统指令。

 00:20:00

▶ And General Groves, who was in charge, wanted to very quickly use both weapons, one plutonium based weapon and the second uranium, a different type of weapon.

而负责此事的格罗夫斯将军希望尽快使用两种武器——一枚钚弹和另一枚不同类型的铀弹。

▶ He wanted to quote, test both.

用他的话说，他想“测试两者”。

▶ And they chose, they had five Japanese cities that were pristine targets that had been untouched by all the firebombing.

他们从五个未遭燃烧弹袭击的原始目标城市中做出了选择。

▶ And so General Groves, you know, put those five cities on the list and he just ordered it to happen.

于是格罗夫斯将军将这五座城市列入名单并直接下令实施。

 00:20:38

▶ And after Nagasaki, it's, it's important to remember that Harry Truman noted in his private handwritten diary that he had given orders to stop any further atomic attacks.

长崎之后必须记住：哈里·杜鲁门在私人日记中写道，他已下令停止进一步的原子弹攻击。

▶ He didn't want to see any more reporting about mass civilian casualties of women and children.

他不想再看到关于妇女儿童大规模伤亡的报道。

▶ We're seeing an understanding almost if I make eye.

我们几乎能感受到某种共识——

▶ We're seeing these pictures from the peace park now, but the children's choir is assembling.

此刻我们正看着和平公园的画面，儿童合唱团正在集结。

今天是2025年8月9日——美国在二战中投下第二颗原子弹的80周年纪念日。

▶ This time on the city of Nagasaki, we joined on the program by Kai Bird and Michael Bell to experts on this topic.

这次在长崎市，我们邀请到该话题专家凯·伯德和迈克尔·贝尔参与节目。

Michael, if I can come back to you now, these were two weapons which were detonated towards the end of the war.

迈克尔，请回到这个话题——这两枚武器是在战争末期引爆的。

 00:24:25

We got brought about with them a nuclear threat that the world had not seen before and pushed us in to the Cold War.

它们带来了前所未有的核威胁，将我们推入冷战。

It was an unprecedented fear during that time.

那是当时史无前例的恐惧。

I think that's absolutely right.

我认为完全正确。

You know, you know, Tukuyas, as you look at the ebb and flow of the Cold War, the fears of incredible proliferation, but also when you start to have multiple, multiple targeted warheads, thermonuclear throw weight.

纵观冷战起伏，人们既恐惧核扩散，也担忧多弹头热核武器的出现。

 00:25:07

In many ways that the, the Roshman Nagasaki attacks, you know, pale in comparison to the capabilities that unfortunately the world is fielded today in these new personal.

从许多方面看，广岛长崎的破坏力与当今世界持有的新型武器相比已相形见绌。

You also have emerging nuclear powers that actually start to think about the war fighting relevance and nuclear weapons, how they can use them.

新兴核国家甚至开始考虑核武器的实战价值及运用方式。

I think that's one of the important lessons of both Roshman Nagasaki that this guy suggested these are not, you know, war fighting weapons.

这正是广岛长崎的重要教训——正如这位所言，这些并非实战武器。

bilibili 00:25:35

▶ These, these are, you know, psychological or terror weapons.

它们是心理威慑或恐怖武器。

▶ But the idea that these have a war fighting relevance today, I think is something that is important for us to reflect on these attacks, to understand the implications, the moral character.

但认为它们具有实战价值的观点，值得我们通过反思这些袭击事件来理解其道德内涵。

▶ Kai, at the time, how did Nagasaki deal with the aftermath of this weapon?

凯，当时长崎如何应对核爆后果？

▶ How did hospitals cope?

医院如何处置？

bilibili 00:26:02

▶ What kind of support was available to those who weren't killed instantly?

幸存者能获得什么支援？

▶ Oh, there was very minimal support, you know, hospitals were destroyed.

支援极其有限——医院已被摧毁。

▶ It took days for Japanese rescue teams to come in and give minimal support to, to the survivors.

日本救援队数日后才抵达提供基本援助。

▶ And of course, many people were injured and many people were exposed to extreme radiation that they had no idea what this was about.

许多人受伤并暴露在强辐射中，却对此一无所知。

bilibili 00:26:36

▶ And they, you know, many of them died slowly, very painful deaths over many months, three to six months.

他们中很多人经历数月（三到六个月）缓慢而痛苦的死亡。

▶ So it was just an extraordinarily new experience for humanity.

这对人类而言是极其陌生的体验。

▶ And unfortunately, we're facing the same threat today.

不幸的是，我们今天仍面临同样威胁。

▶ And I, I think actually today we face a more imminent threat of using these weapons again than we did even during the Cold War, because people have become complacent.

我认为当前核武器使用威胁比冷战时期更紧迫——因为人们已变得麻木。

 00:27:17

▶ We've learned after 80 years to survive, to live with the bomb.

80年来我们学会与核弹共存。

▶ And now we're facing multiple military conflicts in the Ukraine where the Russian leader has threatened to use tactical nuclear weapons.

如今乌克兰等多地爆发军事冲突，俄领导人甚至威胁使用战术核武器。

▶ We have conflicts in India and Pakistan over Kashmir.

印巴在克什米尔地区存在冲突。

▶ And both parties are armed with nuclear weapons.

双方都拥有核武装。

▶ I'm excited.

我很激动。

▶ I apologize again.

再次致歉。

 00:27:45

 At the ceremony, I would like to extend my respect for the victims.

仪式上我谨向遇难者致敬。

 There are also people who are suffering from the disease.

还有深受后遗症折磨的人们。

 80 years ago today, this city was dismitted by the one bomb.

80年前的今天，一枚原子弹摧毁了这座城市。

 It was more powerful than the one detonated by Hiroshima.

其威力超过广岛那枚。

 00:28:35

 70,000 people were set to be victimized, many of them were citizens.

约七万人遇难，其中多为市民。

 There were survivors, but they have suffered for a very long time.

幸存者也长期遭受痛苦。

 80 years ago, there are still divisions around nuclear disarmament and security situation is very severe.

80年后的今天，核裁军分歧仍在，安全形势严峻。

▶ However, it is difficult.

然而前路艰难。
